FROM THE MUSEUMS TO THE TERRITORY

ITINERARIES

SIMPLE WAYS
INTRODUCTION

The 2018 edition of the cultural tourist itineraries “SIMPLE Ways from the museums to the territory” is only one of many initiatives to help visitors rediscover and enjoy the rich and varied cultural heritage of the province of Lecco.

This publication aims to provide the visitor with interesting ways to discover the collections in the Lecco Museum System, which counts a total of 30 museums to date. The aim is also to lead the visitor to extend their visit to the area itself with all its heritage sites and multifaceted beauty so that it becomes the real museum to explore.

We have created a virtuous network of itineraries which allow local or tourist to visit the area and enjoy the landscape and natural surroundings with an increased awareness of the historic, artistic and architectural heritage.

SIMPLE Ways are ten tourist itineraries exploring the Lecco branch of Lake Como, Valsassina, Val San Martino and Brianza, worthwhile destinations for visitors to the area who want to immerse themselves in the spectacular natural surroundings which still bear traces of the local heritage, at times until recently forgotten and only now rebuilt or restored.

These itineraries are the result of a coordinated effort by the museum administrations and the operators, often voluntary workers, to reach the objectives set by the Museum System: conservation, administration of the collections and above all, the promotion of our common heritage.

Apart from visiting places of historical and artistic interest, there will be a chance to taste typical Lombard dishes, with ingredients from our mountains and waterways, with fish (lavaret, shad, perch, trout), dried meats and sausages and cheeses accompanied by a steaming dish of polenta, a drizzle of olive oil from the lake and the bouquet of the local wines.

We hope this will prove a useful and enjoyable guide to our local heritage and we wish all our readers who follow these itineraries a warm welcome and a pleasant stay in the province of Lecco.

In the medieval village of Carenno, the Museum Ca’ Marti and the Stonemasons’ Valley recounts the history, life and work of the stonemasons of the San Martino Valley.

A wealth of knowledge and professional skills passed from one generation to another and still to be seen in the traditional buildings as well as the many disused quarries where the memory of hard work, dedication and emigration is echoed.

The museum was set up as part of a project to preserve the architectural and folk heritage of the town.

It presents historical documents, photographs and stories of the workers together with a collection of work tools and the resources which determined the vocation of the area.

Starting from the museum itself, the “Valle dei muratori” or Stonemasons’ Valley, is a hiking trail with 16 stop points to illustrate the close ties between the town and the art of construction. Follow the path through the lanes of the historic centre with the medieval Tuzzano tower and the 20th century parish church. Then continue as its winds among rivers and chestnut woods to the frescoed oratory of San Domenico and the ancient lime kilns for lime production.

Above Carenno, the Pertús path is an expanded nature trail for those visitors who are curious about the material history of the development of this area. The trail is accessible to people with disabilities.
The Museum of Beato Serafino Morazzone is situated in the recently restored rectory next to the Church previously dedicated to Santa Maria Assunta and now devoted to Serafino Morazzone. Located in the picturesque hamlet of Chiuso, the Museum keeps relics dedicated to the life of Don Serafino Morazzone (1747-1822) and a rare mural painting, realised by Casimiro Radice in the 1871, which represents the “conversion of the Unnamed” an essential episode of Promessi Sposi, the most famous novel of Alessandro Manzoni. The Church beside, dated 1200, presents a single nave with a quadrangular presbytery covered by a barrel vault; within there is a medieval frescos cycle and from the 1858 the urn containing the ashes of Don Serafino Morazzone. Painting decorations adorn the inside, among these we notice “I Dottori della Chiesa” and the “Crucifixion” in the presbytery, realised in the last two decades of the XV century by an unknown master influenced by the art culture of Brescia; recently he is supposed to be the “Maestro di Nave”. Don Serafino Morazzone, who was Alessandro Manzoni’s confessor, is also quoted in the first edition of “Promessi Sposi” as “the good priest of Chiuso”. Moreover, Manzoni situated the meeting between Federico Bor-

Just south of Calolziocorte, at an altitude of about 600 metres on the top of the hill of the same name which separates the municipalities of Torre de’ Busi and Monte Marenzo, the church of Santa Margherita is the most important example of medieval art in the San Martino Valley. It takes about 30 minutes from Monte Marenzo on foot to reach the complex which was built in the late 13th century in an isolated position, probably commissioned by a powerful local family to stand outside the walls of a castle. The church is Romanesque in style with a single nave and wide apse and there is a major cycle of late-medieval frescos inspired by the life of Saint Margaret, patron saint of women in labour.

The Oratory of Santo Stefano is part of the fascinating complex of San Michele, the historic and religious centre which for centuries was the point of reference for the communities in the Torre de’ Busi area; it dates back to the Dark Ages or even Early Christian times and has a trapezoid nave ending in an apse, rebuilt in the 15th century as can be seen from the groin ceiling, single arch windows in the presbytery and the wooden panels on the ashlar walls. Inside there are paintings of great iconographic interest including a nursing Mother and Child from the late 14th century.

In the valley is cultivated the “scagliolo of Carenno”, a corn of ancient tradition from Bergamo, which today is part of the network of ancient corn present in Expo 2015. From the scagliolo are obtained a tasty polenta, excellent baked goods and crispy and healthy biscuits.

A stone’s throw from the railway station in Calolziocorte, the Villa De Ponti Botanic Garden offers a chance to relax among over 500 species of native and exotic trees and shrubs, some wild, some planted. The park is centred around an elliptical path and the vegetation is planted at variable heights and alternates with lawns. The attention to landscape design is evident everywhere from the vertical wall that looks like a cliff, a dale of conifers which recalls a mountain wood and a hedge of hornbeam marking the park boundaries. There is also an area devoted to medicinal and culinary herbs and fruit and a Mediterranean bed with species like mastic tree and broom.
The history of the Botanical Garden is connected to that of the house, Villa De Ponti, now property of the Mountain Community of the Eastern Lake and San Martino Valley.

Both the villa and gardens date back to the early 20th century and were designed in the eclectic and Art Nouveau styles. They were commissioned by the Milanese De Ponti family who were involved in the chemical industry and settled in the area because of their connections with the nearby Barium Salts factory, a prominent example of industrial archaeology in the town.

Villa De Ponti is also the seat to the visitor centre of the Ecomuseum of San Martino Valley which includes the municipalities of Erve, Calolziocorte, Caprino Bergamasco, Carenno, Cisano Boscone, Monte Marenzo, Pontida, Torre de’ Busi and Vercurago. Its aim is to document, preserve and valorize the historic memory of the valley. The Ecomuseum promotes research and educational projects, catalogues the tangible and intangible assets of the area, its environmental and historical heritage.

Continuing along the left bank of the River Adda, on the outskirts of Valle San Martino, rises the historic Convent of the Servi di Maria and church of the Vergine del Lavello. This major centre played a vital role in the history, culture and devotions of the local communities.

The original settlement dates back to Roman times but was destroyed in 1373 during the bloody massacre of Valle San Martino. In the late 15th century it was the site of a miraculous discovery: digging beneath a tomb, the hermit Jacomino came across a spring which proved to have extraordinary healing powers and immediately attracted a considerable flow of pilgrims.

The main cloister, the residential area of the Fathers, and the minor cloister used for guest quarters open onto the river and the churchyard, divided into three spans with a pitched ceiling. The interior houses many paintings and 18th century decorations.

For centuries, the River Adda was the natural border between the Venetian Republic and Milan. Just south of the Lavello monastic complex, the disused railway bridge crosses to the opposite bank of the river and the shores of Lake Olginate and Lake Garlate. A cycle trail in the nature reserve Parco Adda Nord will lead you to the old textiles mill in Garlate which is now a museum.

Recently reopened after extensive restoration work, the Abegg Silk Museum in Garlate has some fascinating exhibits to recount the history of the silk industry in Lombardy, from silkworm production using the Pasteur method to the reeling of the cocoons over the centuries and spinning silk into thread as well as a new section devoted to textile production and the future of silk. The museum was founded by the Swiss company Abegg 1953 under its Italian Director Carlo Job with the mission of documenting the influence of the silk industry on the applied sciences and technological development in silk production. This is carried on today with a particular attention to education and projects for schools. Located in the historic Abegg spinning mill which dates back to the late 18th century, the museum has a collection of machinery, equipment, accessories and products, but the major collection is of the spinning machinery so essential to the silk textiles industry. There is a great circular hydraulic doubler dating back to 1815, the first complex machine ever built by man which was capable of twisting hundreds of threads at the same time and in a regular manner. It is a type of machine which reached Italy during the Middle Ages at the time of the Crusades, appearing for the first time in Lucca in the 13th century and it played a fundamental role in the development of the modern silk industry, even being studied by Leonardo da Vinci. Outside there is a historic mulberry orchard, about sixty trees showing development of this plant which is so essential to the silkworm.

Head downstream along the Adda from Garlate along the cycle path in the Parco Adda Nord nature reserve to Arlate, a hamlet in the municipality of Calco, where the church of Santi Colombano e Gottardo sits on a hilltop overlooking the Adda Valley. Founded in Roman times, it is one of the main sites in the province in both artistic and strategic terms. Originally part of a fortified structure overlooking the river, the original nucleus was transformed into a monastery at the turn of the first millennium. The first documented reference dates back to 1162 when the complex offered hospitality to Benedictine nuns under the Prior of the Abbey of Pontida.

In the hamlet of Somasca, in the municipality of Vercurago, the Basilica of San Girolamo is another important testimony to the devotion of the local people, linked to the figure of San Girolamo Emiliani, a Venetian soldier from a wealthy family who experienced a conversion in 1525. Leaving the Sanctuary, walk through the hamlet of Somasca along the narrow via San Girolamo which passes under a monumental gateway marking the start of a pilgrim path flanked by chapels dedicated to the life of the Saint with a flight of steps halfway leading to a votive grotto. On the outskirts of the historic centre of Somasca overlooking via San Girolamo, the convent of the Ursuline Sisters includes Casa Cittadini Le Sorgenti, a museum dedicated to the life of Blessed Caterina Cittadini, where you will find furnishings, personal effects and documents illustrating the life of this holy woman who, together with her sister Giuditta, set up an important teaching mission in the early 19th century in order to provide for the religious education and improve the lot of young women in the area. Accessible at the foot of the Valletta, about 180 metres above the lake, there is the Rock where San Girolamo set up his orphanage. A path leads to the walls of the castle which according to local tradition belonged to the Innominato, a famous character in Manzoni’s historic novel, The Betrothed.

The history of the Monti Civic Silk Museum of Abbadia Lariana dates back as far as 1818, when this family of silk manufacturers arrived in the lakeside village to open a silk throwing factory. The decision to build along what is now the main road connecting Lecco and Valtellina was actually determined by its proximity to the Zerbo stream, the only water course in the village and an indispensible source of power for the machinery. Subsequent to careful restoration work, the museum is now a major example of industrial archaeology and exhibits original fixtures and fittings, equipment and objects used in silk-making. There used to be a proper silk mill alongside in order to finish the silk manufacturing cycle as well as produce the raw material.
directly onsite as well as a dormitory, a refectory and some small apartments for migrant workers. The museum is set out in the 19th century style. Here you can find the grandiose circular doubler, a piece of machinery 5 metres in diameter and 11 metres high with a total of 972 spindles which in 1897 were granted under a bailment agreement by the Tecnorama Museum of Winterthur in Switzerland in perfect working condition with an electric motor. To the rear of the building you can still see the two hydraulic wheels made of cast iron and iron which powered all the machinery in the factory, the largest of which has a diameter of 7 metres.

The Moto Guzzi Museum tells the story of the iconic Italian motorcycle through a marvellous collection of standard production models, sports bikes, experimental prototypes and engines produced here over the years. In the heart of the old factory in Mandello del Lario where the legend of the Eagle was founded in 1921 the exhibition space devoted to the production models gives an overview of the economic and social development of Italy over the past century: there is the classic Norge from 1928, the first touring bike in motorcycle history designed by Carlo Guzzi together with his brother Giuseppe, some of the Guzzi Sports and GT models from the Thirties, the Airone, the most popular mid-range motorbike in Italy between 1939 and 1957, and then the Falcone, every biker’s dream in the Fifties. But Moto Guzzi has also gone down in history for the bikes that got Italians on the road during the Post-war years, models like the Motoleggera 65 (Guzzino) and the Galletto, and the V7 Sport which reinvented the very concept of the sports bike with its 90° V-twin engine. Alongside one-off pieces like the first motorcycle built by Carlo Guzzi in 1919, the only one to bear the initials G.P. (Guzzi-Parodi), and world-famous models like the Otto Cilindri 500 from 1957, an ingenious design by Giulio Cesare Carcano, the museum also has a selection of historic film footage called “The sound of passion”. Right next to the exhibition you can also visit the Moto Guzzi wind tunnel, the only facility in the world for aerodynamic tests on motorcycles.

Along the eastern shore of Lake Como, the “Sentiero del Viandante” is an ancient trade route leading from Milan to Switzerland. Nowadays, it is a unique opportunity to rediscover the natural beauty and artistic heritage dotted along the lake shore from Lecco northwards. The path heads halfway up the hillside from Abbadia Lariana and runs in and out of hamlets and villages as far as Colico, the gateway to Valtellina.

In a panoramic position along the “Sentiero del Viandante”, the church of San Giorgio in Mandello del Lario has a single nave with a trussed roof and quadrangular apse with a groin vault. Most likely Romanesque in origin, the church has a rare cycle of frescos dating back to the period from 1475 to 1485, a time of repeated outbreaks of the Plague, part of the cultural and religious matrix of the Cistercian movement promoted by Saint Bernard. An important sign of Marian devotion in the province of Lecco, the Santuario della Beata Vergine del Fiume at the mouth of the River Meria in Mandello was founded in 1624. The original floorplan of an octagon surmounted by a dome and lantern saw the later addition of an elegant portico with nine arches and the 14 Baroque chapels of the Stations of the Cross.

The Maggiana Tower Museum, one of the best preserved in the entire Lecco area and fully accessible on all five floors, is situated in a panoramic position in the hamlet of Maggiana which is now part of the town of Mandello del Lario. The massive square building which dominates the lake once controlled the Ducal Road along the lake shore and was in communication with all the fortifications on the eastern shore of Lake Como. It was built in a strategic position in relation to all the tracks leading toward the rich pastures and mines of the nearby Meria Valley and the Piani Resinelli.
highlands. Although it has undergone renovation work on numerous occasions throughout the years, the Tower dates back to the 12th century and was possibly commissioned by the lords of Mandello. Its name harks back to the 19th century restoration work (1828) when a plaque was uncovered which mentioned that Emperor Federico Barbarossa had stayed there in 1158. Tradition also has it that there was once a castle situated on a hillside just north of the town. Situated within a small fortified courtyard, the Tower still has the pointed archway over the door and traces of the original windows in the upper section which are now bricked up. There are also vertical arrow slits above the ancient doorway which was once located on the first floor, standard practice in medieval buildings of this type. Other windows were added at a later date, from the 16th century onwards, giving a more harmonious aspect to the whole. The picturesque terrace on the roof is the work of one of the restoration projects and from here the visitor can enjoy magnificent views of the lake and of the town of Mandello. The original rooms are still intact (one with an interesting painted ceiling). These now house the Museum where a series of artifacts and paintings from the late 19th and early 20th century tell the history of Maggiana and the way local people lived and worked in this area.

In Mandello the area of you can find the following paths: The Paths of Memory - Itinerari della memoria; Pathways in Mandello remind us - Le vie di Mandello ci ricordano; Walking Along the Canal - A piedi lungo la roggia; Towers in the Old Village - Torri nell’antico borgo.

Punta Grumo and Riva Bianca in Lierna are among the largest free beaches on Lake Como which are suitable for bathing.
Giannino Castiglioni is the most prominent of the many artists who have stayed in Lierna. The museum dedicated to him is currently under construction and will be home to the plaster casts which his heirs so generously donated to the municipal authorities. Born in Milan in 1884, he studied at Brera and during his long career took part in exhibitions in Italy and abroad. A painter in his youth, he later became exclusively focused on sculpture and was extremely prolific, producing about 700 works including the monumental sculptures for the Houses of Parliament in Montevideo, the statue of Christ the King in the Catholic University of Milan and that of Dante in the courtyard of the Pinacoteca Ambrosiana, not to mention countless funeral monuments in the Monumental Cemetery in Milan or the Monument to the War Dead in Lecco and Mandello del Lario. Castiglioni was also involved in the construction of the war cemeteries in Redipuglia, Grappa, Caporetto, Zara, Pola and Timau and coined many medals to commemorate famous historic figures. He first came to Lierna in the early years of the 20th century and had a studio in via Roma where he worked. on the reconstruction of the local cemetery. Here he designed the central church of San Michele and the sculptures and bas reliefs for the chapels of the Micheli, Balbi-ani, Spada and Costa families.

Originally a Cistercian convent dedicated to the Virgin Mary, Villa Monastero in Varenna owes its current eclectic appearance to repeated reconstruction projects over the course of nine centuries. It was the Mornico family from Valsassina who transformed the convent into a private residence between 1609 and 1645, but it then passed to a series of different owners including some illustrious members of Milanese high society at the turn of the 20th century such as Carolina Maumari Seufferheld, a relative of the novelist Alessandro Manzoni. It was bought by the German industrialist Walter Kees who renovated it in a particularly Nordic style between 1897 and 1909 before passing to the De Marchis, a Milanese family with Swiss roots, who left it to the Italian state in 1939 to become public property and a museum. There are 14 rooms open to the public with a wealth of furnishings in a variety of styles. Still in use as a conference centre, Villa Monastero has hosted many major scientific conventions over the years, including the summer school of the prestigious Italian School of Physics which counts 60 Nobel Prize winners. The lush Botanical Garden contains a variety of native and exotic species and extend for almost two kilometres along the lakeside so that in every season the villa is an explosion of colour, shapes and scents.

Perched on the hilltop above Varenna, Vezio Castle is considered one of the loveliest on Lake Como. This medieval fort has uncertain origins and is believed to be connected with the Lombard queen Teodolinda. It centres on a square tower with battlements and a drawbridge, is home to a centre for breeding birds of prey and offers breathtaking views over the lake.

Practically opposite Villa Monastero, with access from beside the Varenna tourist information office, the Luigi Scanagatta Ornithological and Natural History Museum was founded by a local scholar of ornithology, malacology and botany who left his collection of local and migratory birds to the town. The museum has a major scientific library of over 1,500 volumes, monographs and pamphlets, with examples of Natural Histories dating back to the 18th century.

The first floor has a series of dioramas and exhibition cases while the second floor focuses on evolutionary and survival strategies of various organisms, with examples of nesting and egg laying.

Varenna is a particularly lovely village with a wealth of sights, popular with tourists for the spectacular scenery and historic architecture. It has a typical Roman layout with the space organised into insulae. The oldest church in the village is probably that of San Giovanni Battista right in the middle of the main square. The Romanesque single nave has important fragments of frescos dating back to the mid-14th century, while the paintings in the apse are from the 16th century.

The provostal church of San Giorgio contains a number of frescos from different periods including a rare image of the Lombard queen Teodolinda, the driving force behind the Christianisation of the lake area as well as an interesting polyptych by Giovanni Pietro Brentani dated 1467. On the right in the second Chapel you can see the old Altarpiece of St. Mary Monastery (Now Villa Monstero). Apart from places of worship, Varenna also has architectural attractions such as Villa Cipressi, composed of buildings constructed between the 17th and 19th centuries and the Hotel Royal Victoria, once a textiles mill and a hotel since 1838, where illustrious guests supposedly included the English Queen Victoria. Opposite is the multipurpose room “Rosa e Marco De Marchi” used for Exhibition and Convention Centre.
The museum collection, which opened in 2014 in Bellano along the main road beside the schools, offers visitors an incredible number of vintage radios and gramophones acquired by the avid collectors Paolo and Rina Panatti over a fifty year period. The museum is divided into six sections in chronological order: the area dedicated to Marconi, a section on American radios, the Fascist period, gramophones and records, the Post-war period with the first wire recorders and finally, the section on the Sixties. Rare finds include the first Marconi radio from 1923, the Milan Radio from 1929, a gramophone dated 1897 with the first cardboard record, an Edison gramophone with wax cylinders, vinyl records with songs from the Fifties and many other curious items, all in perfect working order.

Spend an hour or two at the Museo delle Grigne in Esino Lario to discover the history of the Esino area but also the great geological events which made our planet inhabitable.

The limestone-dolomite cliffs of the Grigne and their outcrops have yielded an extraordinary wealth of molluscs of all sizes and have been drawing scientists and paleontologists from all over the world for a century.

The museum has archaeological finds, fossils, local stone, specimens of local fauna and flora as well as ethnographic exhibits which illustrate the diverse origins of the two settlements in the Esino valley (“Crès” which is of Celtic origin and “Piasch” founded by the Romans).

The museum bears witness to the oldest human settlements on the slopes of the Grigne.

In Villatico, a district of Colico, the Museum of Rural Culture presents a faithful reconstruction of a country cottage between the 19th and 20th centuries, starting with the great kitchen on the ground floor.

In the adjoining room you can see the bedroom with the great wrought iron double bed with its traditional mattress, sheets, blankets and bedspread. In the wardrobe there are period clothes and accessories and a chest containing the precious linen trousseau. You can learn about the farming and forestry traditions of the area, haymaking, cheesemaking, animal husbandry, cereal and grape growing.
Not to mention all the crafts which were often practiced under the home roof like wool spinning and iron, wood and leather work. There is also an exhibit on what was traditionally women’s work.

The historic complex of the Forte di Montecchio built between 1912 and 1914 in Colico is one of the largest and best preserved forts in Europe and was part of the northern frontier known as the “Cadorna Line”, built for the first War. It features high walls of cut granite, numerous underground rooms and passages which include a powder magazine excavated over 60 metres into the rock. The four original 149 mm Schneider cannons are still intact in their turrets protected by steel domes, as is the electrical systems and the complex ventilation system. With a range of over 14 kilometres, these imposing cannons controlled lower Valtellina, lower Valchiavenna and the northern stretch of Lake Como thanks to their strategic position which enjoys a magnificent view over the upper Lario. Nature landscapes and history intermingle during a gentle stroll, surrounded by cultural and culinary ideas.
Built at the turn of the 17th century by the then Spanish Governor of Milan, Don Pedro Enriquez de Acevedo, count of Fuentes de Valdepero, the Forte di Fuentes is situated on Montecchio est, in a strategic position to control the Swiss border. The fundamental elements were already in place when in 1606 the fort prepared to welcome its first garrisons: eight companies of infantry, two thousand sappers and twenty pieces of artillery, later reinforced by a further eight pieces. Inside, the Parade Ground covers 5,000 square metres bounded by a number of different buildings including the Governor’s House and the remains of a church dedicated to San Barbara, patron saint of artillerymen.

The stretch towards the Orobian Alps of the defence line “Occupazione Avanzata Frontiera Nord”, also known as the “Cadorna Line” has features typical of mountain fieldwork fortifications: with the help of military labourers from the Local Militia, civilian builders and craftsmen built kilometres of trenches, little shelters painstakingly excavated into the rock, gunhouses and caves for machine guns and extensive barriers of barbed wire.

At the tip of the Piona peninsula, the 11th century abbey dedicated to San Nicolò, protector of sailors, is nestled at the feet of Monte Legnone and Monte Legnoncino on the hillside of Olgiasca. Inhabited since ancient times judging by the find in the current monastery church of a sepulchral urn dating back to the 3rd-4th century. In 616, a small shrine was built on the orders of Agrippino, Bishop of Como, dedicated to Santa Giustina, the apse of which is still well-preserved. Inside, a single nave with long walls made of dark stone and a wooden ceiling ends in a semicircular apse. Of particular interest is the famous cycle of months, a fresco which illustrates the most common rural activities in the cloister built in the 13th century by Bonaccorso of Gravedona. The order of St. Benedict is a source of inspiration and a reference point to the life of Cistercian monks and for the cloistered community of the Abbey of Piona.

In Robustello, near Colico just above the ford on the Inganna stream, the dirt road for Fontanedo leads to the tower of the same name built in 1357 under the orders of Bernabò Visconti, perhaps to reinforce a pre-existing structure built in a strategic position on the spur on the northern slopes of Monte Legnone to defend the important communications route then known as the “Scalottola”, now called “Sentiero del Viandante”. There is a small fortified village around the tower with kilns, stables, hay barns, a well and a chapel in a reasonable state of conservation.
Near Der-vio the fortified village of Corenno Plinio is renowned as one of the most picturesque on the lake. Towering over the houses is the imposing castle built in the mid-14th century by the Andreani family who were granted Corenno by the Archbishop of Milan. The parish church is dedicated to St. Thomas of Canterbury and has interesting frescos and funerary arches on the exterior. Corenno Plinio, a district of Dervio, is located on the eastern shore of the lake at the foot of Mount Legnoncino, perched on a rocky face, overlooking the center lake.

Located in the heart of the hamlet of Vendrognò, the Museum of Milk and the history of Muggiasca occupies what was once the local dairy co-op, where for almost a century milk was collected, processed and transformed by artisans. The original building is largely intact and contains a collection of over 400 exhibits including documents and artifacts. Visitors can see all the equipment used in a dairy in the four rooms.
A paved road leads to the pasture of Alpe Giumello - at an altitude of 1538 metres. Continuing on foot to the western end of the hilltop you have marvellous views over Lake Como. You can then continue towards the saddle overlooking Val Varrone and finally reach the summit of the hill where the panorama opens out over Valsassina, the Grigna and Resegone, Pian delle Betulle, Legnone and Pizzo Alto.

Iron was first mined in the upper valley in pre-Roman times and in the Iron Room in the Premana Ethnographic Museum you can trace the evolution of ironworking in the Prealps from its origins and the period when forgers emigrated to Venice, Milan and Carrara right up to the current production of knives and scissors. As far back as 1574, when Premana had just over 600 inhabitants, there were still 4 swordsmiths, 3 farriers and 40 smiths able to forge knives and scissors as well as keys, railings and locks. This industry was greatly facilitated by the lodes present in Valsassina and Val Varrone and the woodland with water courses to provide power to drive the furnaces. The Farming Room displays objects used by mountain peasants working the hillsides and growing buckwheat and barley as well as herding goats, sheep and cows; the Costume Room has a display of traditional clothing like the lovely “morel”, a wedding dress with Greek-Albanian influences, instruments used for weaving and some of the handiwork of the local women.

In the historic centre of Premana, you will find the parish church of San Dionigi, located in a strategic position, a fact clearly demonstrated by the narrow embrasure in the lower part of the belfry, which was once a watchtower. The church, which is first mentioned in the 13th century, is richly decorated inside with interesting works dating back to the mid-17th century attributed to Luigi Reali. A grandiose 16th century polyptych with the saints Sebastiano, Rocco and Bernardo adorns the church. The nearby Oratory of the Immacolata dates back to the late Middle Ages.
In the Piani Resinelli area, the Parco Museo Minerario dei Piani Resinelli is a mining museum which includes the “Anna” and “Cavallo” mines, mined for centuries for lead minerals for the production of weaponry and agricultural implements for the Duchy of Milan and the Venetian Republic. Finally shut down in the Fifties due to the drop in prices and consequent decline in mining, they have undergone restoration work so that visitors can discover the different methods used in mining according to the historical period and means available at the time, as well as learn about the lives of miners in the past. There are guided tours where you can go down into the bowels of the earth. 30 HOME MUSEUM VILLA GEROSA

The House Museum Villa Gerosa is located within Parco Valentino at Piani Resinelli and collects, keeps and gives value to pictures, documents and videos which highlight the geomorphologic and naturalistic characteristics of the Group of Grigne. The industrial man from Lecco, Valentino Gerosa Crotta (1868-1960) left as a heritage to the Touring Club Italiano both Villa Gerosa and Parco Valentino. The Museum is entirely constituted by applications and totally multimedia placements in order to develop educational activities, researches and mediation with the territory taking into account the tourist vocation of the place. Four rooms are dedicated to the pre-alpine natural environment with the lake and Alps as background: visitors can discover path, faces, alpine huts, learning also the geology. The visitor can also see climbers in action, enter virtually in the mines, follow the flowing of the river and discover the plants and animals who gave life to this beautiful environment. Within the museum there is an interactive table that allows the access to period photographic catalogues in which are documented the activities of legendary climbers. It is also told, through old records, the birth of the path "della direttissima" of Grigna, one of the most fascinating and attended path in the Alps. The immersive projection system involves the visitor through suggestive scenarios: the vertical dimension of Grigna, with its white limestone towers, which it fronts onto the Parco Valentino where the horizontal dimension is represented by the field, disappears and reappears more down in shape of lake/water.

An interactive screen allows visitors to discover the fascinating world of the flora and the historic characters which were important in the botanic exploration. Sound positions isolate from every outside noise and conduct the visitor in a timeless place where the only sound is the birds’ warbling and other animal’s calls. The route ends in the room that hosts a little collection of embalmed animals, which the Touring Club collected since the 60’s. This room offers an idea of the Alpine fauna. A museum in a museum which also evocates the atmosphere of that time, when in Italy began an ecologic conscience bonded with the defence of animals and environment.

In the southern part of the medieval centre of Moggio, the Parish Liturgical and Ethnographic Museum gives an overview of the history of the inhabitants and the surrounding area, their way of life, religious customs, traditions and age-old crafts. Tools on display on the ground floor bear witness to local ingenuity and these were used for generations in the fields and woods, farmhouses and stables. Recently inaugurated, the museum also has reconstructions of traditional domestic environments with original furniture dating back to the 19th and 20th century.

In the vale of Valsassina, on the eastern slopes of the Grigna Settentrionale, the town of Pasturo owes its name to the fertile pastures on the plain and the mountains above, still some of the finest in the entire province. The wide arena of the clays, marls and moraines which constitute the local soil is cut through by the course of the Pioverna stream which, north of the hamlet of Baiedo, winds between two cliffs which plunge almost 300 metres into the valley. This is the Chiusa dam, where the road crosses the stream by means of the old Chiuso bridge, a strategic point in the history of the valley. In Baiedo the church of San Pietro Martire, possibly built in the 15th century, has a fine Baroque altar and the older though much renovated church of Sant'Andrea, built beside the cemetery where the poet Antonia Pozzi lies. Her poems were collected and published posthumously by Eugenio Montale under the title “Words” or “Parole”.
Inaugurated in Pasturo in 2012 to mark the centenary of her birth, the cultural itinerary “In the footsteps of Antonia Pozzi - a poetic tour of the area” is a permanent exhibition of words and images dedicated to the Milanese poet.

The Baroque Sanctuary of the Madonna della Cintura in Pasturo is one of the major places of worship in Valsassina, an area with a strong tradition of faith where Marian devotion became widespread from the mid-17th century onward. The devotion to the Madonna of the Belt originated with the miraculous apparition of the Virgin to Saint Monica, the mother of Saint Augustine. The 17th century wall decoration is very fine as is the altarpiece by Luigi Reali.

The Morterone Museum of Contemporary Art was founded in the mid-'80s in the smallest municipality in Italy, a focal point for many years in the work of the poet Carlo Invernizzi, situated on the other side of the Resegone from Lecco. There is a series of sculptures and paintings by Italian and European artists (initially thirty in all) in a true open-air museum set in uncontaminated surroundings. The works of dozens of artists representing the best of Italian and international creativity serve as the hypothesis and concrete possibility of man acting in a way that is not alienated from or exploiting anthroposified nature but rather engaged in dialogue with it which can provide original and meaningful interpretative guidelines for all who inhabit or come into contact with it. The integration of art and nature takes place in uncontaminated places which allow freedom of expression of the affirmation of the fundamental oneness of man and nature, as declared by Francesca Pola, curator of the entire exhibition project and also curator of MACRO, the Rome Museum of Contemporary Art.

The Primaluna Museum has a collection of articles which tell the story of everyday country life in the 19th and 20th century. The museum is housed in a historical 17th century building in the town centre where the visitor will find reconstructions of domestic environments such as the kitchen and bedroom as well as plenty of space devoted to working life in the countryside. The Museum of Fornace is situated within the plain between Barzio and Pasturo in the middle of Valsassina. It rises to tell the history, the traditions, the culture and the economy of the valley. The Furnace can count a 1000 square meters surface and it still presents the central nucleus of brick’s cooking. This Museum is a path through the memories, the knowledge, the men and passions which characterized this territory. The way is mostly multimedia and it expands on two floors through four main thematic areas: the mine, the dairy art, the zootechnics and the mountain-climbing. On the ground floor we can find a section dedicated to the mining history in Valsassina. Along the perimeter of the ex-furnace we find the section dedicated to caesarean art and zootechnics, which are still important in this territory. In Valsassina environment and sport create a fascinating bond that attracts in a beautiful landscape tourists all over the world. Famed as the “pearl of Valsassina”, Barzio is the main summer and winter sports resort in the valley and offers a wide range of free time activities. During the 16th century, Barzio saw the rise of the ancient noble family the Manzonis, who moved here from the neighbouring province of Bergamo and owned a number of manor houses including the 17th century Palazzo Manzoni, today the Town Hall and public library and once home to those very Manzonis who were ancestors of the author of “The Betrothed”.

Small and quaint village, within walking distance from Barzio along a short trail, Concenedo has maintained the appearance of a farmer village still well represented by the old town where homes and old farmhouses, left largely intact, gather around the small church dedicated to St. Mary of the Assumption. There are many evidences of faith that make “Concenedo” a true “holy ground”. There are the Monastery of Carmel and the house Paul VI used to the Ambrosian clergy, just in the same location, Cantello, where in the fifteenth century an ancient monastery and shelter for sick pilgrims was built, as well as the picturesque Via Lucis, a path of prayer and penance formed by small votive chapels that accompany the traveller during the ascent from Barzio.

A modern cable car connects Barzio with Piani di Bobbio which is renowned for its breathtaking mountain scenery and a popular hiking destination in summer months. In winter, it becomes a ski resort with slopes to suit every level of ability.

The Barro Archaeological Museum was founded on the discovery of the major site on Monte Barro, an enormous fortification with over 5 kilometres of walls on the southern perimeter. At Piani di Barra, excavations have revealed a late-Roman settlement connected with the great Prealpine border defence built between the 5th and 6th century to protect against incursions by Germanic tribes before it was overrun by the Goths of Teodoric in the battle of the bridge of Olginate on the River Adda in 590 A.D. Surrounded by an archaeological park with 14 buildings, the museum tells the story of the fortification up until its deliberate abandonment, using information panels, pictorial reconstructions and three-dimensional models along with figures and information to help the visitor understand the place of the Barro site in the larger context of the Italian peninsula. There is also a large exhibition of objects from daily life.

A one kilometre stroll through fields and woods with a marvellous view of Lake Annone takes you from the heart of Galbiate to the Ethnographic Museum of Upper Brianza in Camporeso, a research and exhibition centre which focuses on the customs and way of life of the Brianza hills. pre-industrial and post-industrial society in the area with work tools and implements used in daily life and an audio-visual documentation of silk-worm production, farming, cookery and diet, animal husbandry, rural transport and the Pan pipes which became the predominant instrument in local folk music instrument during the 20th century. Oral and visual communication plays a vital role in passing on knowledge, behavioural models and forms of art and expression. Consequently, the museum carries out its ethnographic research by documenting the lifestyle and memories of local inhabitants, particularly the experiences and stories of those who are the last to live by certain trades or ways of life in the hills and on the lake. A separate section of the museum which focuses on bird snaring and hunting is located in the Costa Perla Roccolo, once a bird blind, on the road leading up towards the Eremo or hermitage on Monte Barro.

In collaboration with the Commission for the Protection of the Mountain Environment of the Lombardy branch of CAI, the Italian Alpine Club, the Insubria University and the Minoprio Foundation, the botanical nature trail called after Giovanni Fornaciari is an integral part of the Native Flora Centre Centro Flora Autoctona (CFA) of the Lombardy Regional Authority which is administered by the nature reserve Parco Monte Barro. With its roots in the first alpine botanical garden in Italy created here in 1891, the trail comprises five of the main habitats of the Lombard Prealpine environment: the meadows growing on carbonate rock, scrub, rough pasture, submediterranean brush and mesophile woodlands.

At an altitude of 750 metres, at the end of the only road on Monte Barro, the Hermitage or Eremo has a colourful history, starting out as a Roman stronghold, then becoming headquarters of the Ostrogoth command, a Lombard fort, a military outpost of the Sforzas, a Franciscan monastery and, in more recent times, a sanatorium which was in operation until 1968. Since 2013 there has been a modern hostel with spaces for groups and lecture halls. As well as being home to the environmental education laboratory and Visitor Centre, the Eremo is the ideal departure point for a tour of the reserve along a loop that winds across the hillside starting and finishing at the nearby Alpine Regiment hut. The “Nature Trail” begins at the historic Church of San Michele, and continues for 800 metres along the eastern slope of the mountain, offering breathtaking views over the lake and town of Lecco with detailed information panels along the way illustrating the local flora and fauna.

The Costa Perla Experimental Ornithology Station is located in an old bird blind for hunting which has been turned into a centre for the study of migration patterns and was recognised by the Lombardy Regional Authority in 1992. Monte Barro occupies a strategic position along migration routes and, thanks to the great variety of invertebrates which populate the meadows, is a stopover and feeding point before or after the crossing of the Alps. It can also be visited during the ringing campaigns, when birds are measured and set free after first being recorded on a European databank.

A proper herb garden with aromatic and medicinal plants greets the visitor to the Centro Fatebenefratelli in the historic centre of Valmadrera. Hospitallers, founded in Spain by Saint John of God. In fact, it seems that the particular climate of the Valmadrera area favours the growth of a wide variety of medicinal and aromatic herbs as well as rare mountain flora. The restoration work was carried out by volunteers in consultation with experts in keeping with the layout of a traditional convent garden. The original division of the garden into four large squares was retained and some modifications were made to the internal paths to better allow close observation of the plants.

These are planted in family groups (labiatae, compositae, umbelliferae, rosaceae, graminacea, etc.), bearing in mind their natural habitat (sun, partial shade, wetland, soil quality), along guidelines provided by the Director of the Rezia Botanic Garden of Bormio, Prof. Fornaciari. The garden currently boasts about 450 species; new areas have been planted with aquatic plants and local wildflowers. Each plant is identified with a plaque bearing its common name, Latin name and family (with a red dot for poisonous or highly toxic plants). The mission of the botanic garden is research, propagation and identification of medicinal and aromatic plants, promotion of events and courses on themes relating to herbs (health, diet, cosmetics and cultivation), the creation of a permanent botanical observatory open to the public, and cultural exchange with other public and private gardens.

There are painted decorations which date back to the 15th and 16th centuries.

Built on the site of a Benedictine oratory, the Church of San Giorgio in Annone di Brianza is typical of the local Late Gothic style. There is a cycle of frescos believed to be by the Master of the Sforza Altarpiece.

In the wake of extensive renovation work, the lakeside promenade in Malgrate has become a popular meeting point to pass the time, take a stroll or go for a cycle.

The typical product that you can enjoy in this area is the potato of Annone, used in the past as an alternative to cereals and present in this area already in the nineteenth century.

Situated in a classroom of the boarding school Collegio “Alessandro Manzoni”, the Civic Museum of Natural History Don M. Ambrosioni di Merate boasts a significant collection donated by professor Don Michelangelo Ambrosioni, a teacher in the school from 1891 to 1935 as well as being an avid collector. Originally intended as a teaching resource for schools in the area, the museum has a large collection of around 2100 exhibits in display cases with explanatory panels. In the great hall on the first floor there... is the collection of minerals and the paleontology collection which includes some fascinating fossils of plants and animals found in the Lecco area. The zoological section deals with naturalised animals displayed according to biological classification and habitat and is located in the two side rooms. There is a remarkable malacological collection.

On the second floor of the Museum the visitors can see the petrographical collection and three large display cases devoted to botany and physics. A room named after the Italo-Canadian Commandant Giacinto Lazzarini, a secret agent and coordinator of a number of partisan groups who, in April 1945, managed to prevent a heavy air raid on the Merate area. This room houses the historical section on the Resistance and there are personal effects and documents from the Lazzarini archive as well as war relics and publications on the history of the Resistance.

Villa San Rocco, once a Capuchin convent and convalescent home for officials during the Great War, is now home to the Brera Astronomical Observatory. It was founded in response to the increase in interference from public lighting and the vibrations caused by the first tram lines which caused a rapid deterioration in observation conditions in Brera. In 1926 therefore, some observation instruments were transported to Merate for installation, including a modern telescope - a Zeiss reflector with a mirror 102 cm in diameter and a focal length of 5 metres which Italy had obtained from Germany in part payment for war damages under the Treaty of Versailles.

The Nature Reserve of Lake Sartirana extends over an area of about 24 hectares in the Municipality of Merate. A Path, accessible only on foot, runs for 2 kilometres along the shores of Lake Sartirana, that like an enormous pond is actually an intramorenic lake and a typical feature of the Brianza countryside.

The Regional Park of Montevecchia and Valle del Curone nature reserve coincides with the far boundary of the green area in southeastern Brianza. A highly diversified area, it includes areas of major environmental interest but also urban areas, industrial estates, farmland and architectures of great artistic and cultural value such as the Sanctuary of the Beata Vergine del Carmelo in Montevecchia, a settlement dating back to Roman times when it was an lookout post guarding the Brianza hills. This role is reflected in fact in the origins of the place name “Mons Vigiliarum” (mount of the lookout post).

Between Parco di Montevecchia and Parco del Monte Barro there is a path linking the southern end of the province of Lecco with the town itself, a trail almost 35 kilometres long which can also be broken up into sections. It starts in the municipality of Lomagna to then cross the hill of Montevecchia and from there heads up the slopes of Monte di Brianza. From there it follows the ridge of San Genesio and comes back down the saddle of Galbiate to wind around Monte Barro and finally descend to Lecco.

The Giuseppe Mozzanica Foundation, situated in Pagnano, a district of Merate, was founded to preserve and promote the work of a sculptor and painter who was reclusive and averse to publicity, driven by a deeply ethical idea of artistic work rather than aesthetic notions. Set up in 2007, the heart of the Foundation is “Gipsoteca” (the gallery of plaster casts), a treasure chest and workshop commissioned by the artist himself in the Fifties in the courtyard of his home. In the Foundation there is a display of plaster casts but also works in marble, bronze and terracotta executed between the 1920s and the 1960s, a testimony to the vigorous and coherent studies of the sculptor. As well as the pieces of sculpture (about 260 in all), the collection also includes drawings and paintings by the artist as well as a major series of photographic plates: a corpus of 183 elements which illustrate the artist’s working method which was based on observation of reality with few concessions to ornamentation or reticence.

One of the few religious complexes which still has an active community where the daily routines of convent life is marked by strict observance of the Rule, the Sabbioncello Convent in Merate has close ties with the history of the Franciscan order in Lombardy, and in particular with the repercussions of the Lutheran Reformation in the Roman Catholic world.

In the past centuries the city of Merate was chosen as a favourite holiday place, first by some of the great noble family and later also by the bourgeoisie, especially from Milan. Today you can see many beautiful old villas: Villa Baslini, Villa Crespi, Villa Cornaggia, Villa de Ferrari-Bagatti, Villa Dal Verme, Villa Greppi, Villa Lavezzani. Among the most significant there are Villa Belgiojoso, Villa Subaglio e Villa Confalonieri. The latter, owned by the city, with its park open to the public can be visited on request together with others.

The Tre Tetti Museum in Sirtori is quite unique in that the works on display are not presented as exhibits but rather as part of a complex whole through which the visitor strolls. Landscape art, light art, architecture, sculpture, painting and design are seamlessly interwoven with poetry and music and a spatialization of sound in order to construct a polysemic whole where the real protagonist is the metalanguage uniting them. The museum opens at sunset when the “light sculptures” stand out against the shadows in the nocturnal landscape designed by Giorgio Riva for this hilltop in Montevecchia park. At that time of day, the Tre Tetti is like a balcony overlooking the dazzling lights on the valley floor. The lights of Milan, the stars, and, when it rises, the moon, all form part of the composition. But then there are the sounds too: verses from Dante, Homer and Shoenberg’s Pierrot, or voices, notes and noises making acoustic trajectories among the branches of the trees, an overwhelming series of multi-sensorial and sinesthetic stimuli. The museum was designed to form a network of different pathways, each of which is constellated with signs, forms and symbols which the hand of the artist has deconstructed and subtracted from its habitual codes and meanings to reveal other possible links of interconnection. And it recomposes them in a weird, metamorphical universe where the spaces, geometric shapes, letters of the alphabet and even punctuation marks are presented and interwoven as if they were characters created for the immediate experience of all the senses, as if it were theatre. The magic of the place consists of the way in which the very purity of the shapes and beauty of the images is used in a simple almost intuitive approach even in the most complex syntax and spatial designs.
